

Introducing God

What is "Introducing God"?

The God to whom we are introduced in Introducing God is the God of the Bible. We get to know God gradually as we look together at key passages in his biography. Each session of the course is based on a chapter of the Bible.

Each night we have dinner together (gold coin donation) listen to a message and discuss what we have heard. It makes for great conversation as everyone's opinion is valued and thought provoking. Great friendships are usually the result of people's participation in the course.

If you're unsure, come to the introductory session and check it out!CLICK HERE to REGISTER for the introductory session

What?
Introductory session

Date & Time
New Session to start soon

Location
To be advised

Want more info?
To register you interest Contact Domini on 0432 573 707 or via the contact form.
Course length

Introducing God comprises:
- an introductory session ... CLICK HERE to REGISTER
- plus one get-together each week for 8 weeks
- And an optional fun weekend away Experience of past participants

After a bit of prodding, I went along to the Roxbury Hotel in Glebe, a little unsure of what to expect. And a little nervous at the prospect of meeting other media types in the Christian world.

I shouldn't have been so concerned. Because, by the end of dinner on the first night—before the official part of the evening—I was already sold on the concept. What occurred in the hour or so following dinner, the talk and table discussion, was incredibly frank and comfortable, and the format allowed for those a little unsure why they were there, like I was at first, to assess the situation.

Exactly what Introducing God is all about became clear quickly: a step-by-step look at the promise of God and the story of Jesus in a completely non-threatening environment with plenty of scope for asking questions. The discussion groups were well-led, enjoyable and thought-provoking (at least the group I was in).

Was it successful? From a newcomer's perspective - absolutely! The worst thing that can happen to you if you are a first-timer to anything is feeling uncomfortable. That's one thing that I haven't experienced in anything associated with Christians in the Media from day one. The people are friendly and always make an effort to greet and talk to new people. And that carries over to Bible study, church on Sunday nights and social events.

From a topical point of view, it was vibrant, colourful, relevant, and, very topical.

At the end, I wanted it to keep going. Maybe it was partially because I hadn't experienced such an openly-warm ambience in other like situations, especially in the last 18 months. But more likely it's because Introducing God was well-organised, not too long on any given night and a bit of fun. Ray Hickson, sports writer, Daily Telegraph.
About the Introductory Session

The Introductory Session is set in the pagan amphitheatre in Athens as the Apostle Paul interacts with the pluralistic multicultural crowd of the first century, putting his thesis to those who will listen. As he speaks of the resurrection of Jesus, some sneer, but others say they would like to hear more. It is these varied responses that famed the conversations of the Grecian philosophers. About the author

Dominic Steele came into relationship with God while working as a radio journalist and now heads up the Sydney based

Christians in the Media, helping media workers and communications students start and grow in their relationships with God. He is married to Catherine and together they have three young children. About your hosts

David and Domini are local residents with their two gorgeous children. They are part of the family at Metro Central Community Church. David runs his own handyman business and Domini is a teacher/mum.